

This image shows a full page of blank primary-ruled paper. It features a vertical margin line on the left side. The rest of the page is filled with horizontal ruling lines. Each row consists of three lines: a solid top line, a dashed middle line, and a solid bottom line. There are ten such rows across the page, providing a structured space for handwriting practice.

